Punkin is a senior lady who is a little beat up from living on the streets. She is FIV positive, has a scarred ear and what looks like a skinned nose. She was found and brought to the shelter by a nice person so she could have a chance at a better life. She is a really sweet girl and loves affection.

A vet recently diagnosed Punkin's skinned nose as squamous cell carcinoma, an aggressive skin cancer, and it is inoperable. Punkin needs an antibiotic injection every other week to fight secondary infections, and she needs Fortiflora, a probiotic, added to her food daily.
