Not at shelter, need to find her another home

Our sweet kitty, "Sprout", needs a loving home. She was my mother's cat and we adopted her when my mother went into a memory care last March. My husband and I were not "cat lovers"; however, it didn't take long until we fell in love with her. She's gentle and loving. She can jump up on sofas and ottomans, but no higher. She loves attention and is playful and smart. She uses her litter box consistently and is not destructive. She lived with another cat most of her life, until that cat's death four years ago. Sadly, since we've adopted her, I've developed a skin eczema that is now severe, and since I'm allergic to her, my dermatologist says I have to re-home her. This is the only way I can get well. We are heart broken and desperate to find a home for her because we just cannot euthanize her. She arrived on my parents' doorstep as a young cat so we estimate her age to be 15-17 years. She was diagnosed with diabetes about four years ago, my mother tried to give her insulin shots but couldn't. Instead we put her on a prescription
